EDITOR'S PREFACE

THIS Honour Roll is the work of many hands. It was undertaken in the intervals of other exacting duties by Mr. W. B.

H. Teakles, B.A., Assistant Registrar, early in the war. It was he who identified the University men in the military lists, and collected much of our information concerning them. In this difficult task he was aided by Pte. C. F. Black, B.A., and Lieut. G. C. Young, after their return from overseas, their personal knowledge of both graduates and undergraduates being of the utmost value. Advice and assistance in regard to the designs were given by Professor A. A. Stoughton. The task of compiling and preparing for the press has fallen to the editor who arranged to have the records checked and supplemented in Ottawa, and is in general responsible for the final form of the Honour Roll. All who have contributed to the work are conscious of its limitations. Some names may have been overlooked and it has not been possible to get photographs of all whose names appear, but a further appeal is made to our readers to manifest their generosity by repairing our omissions in order that our records may be complete even if all have not received justice in this volume.

INTRODUCTION

THIS memorial volume gives a brief record of eleven hundred and nineteen graduates and undergraduates who represented the University of Manitoba in the service of their country during the recent war. The record is simple and unadorned as befits modern warfare in which whole peoples engage and in which individual effort is obscured if not entirely merged in the national contribution.

The Roll of the Fallen contains a high percentage of the general service roll, one hundred and forty names in all, and includes those who died as a direct consequence of war as well as those killed in action. Of military honours two hundred and sixty-seven were awarded to our men, and these were distributed as follows:— Victoria Cross, one; Companion of the Bath, one; Companion of St. Michael and St. George, five; Commander of the British Empire, two; Officer of the British Empire, four; Distinguished Service Order and Bars, seventeen; Military Cross and bars, ninety-two; Distinguished Flying Cross, two; Distinguished Conduct Medal, five; Military Medal and bars, thirty-five; Meritorious Service Medal, three; Foreign Decorations, sixteen; Mentioned in Despatches, sixty-six; and Brought to the notice of the Secretary of State, eighteen.

This is a noble record worthy of the faith of our founders who gave us the motto: Pueris his dedit Deus scientiam.

Before this volume reaches the reader almost ten years will have elapsed since the world was plunged in war and the peaceful waters of our University were troubled by the fallen angel of destruction. Since that catastrophe our vicissitudes have been many; we have heard the first call to service, caught a vision of the world made free from war, borne the burden of the long fight and the sadness of loss, experienced the difficulties of readjustment and suffered some "disenchantment" from the hopes with which we faced the issues of the struggle

It would be difficult now after five years of frenzied forgetfulness, following upon four years of frenzied strife, to recapture the first vision of 1914 or to probe the inner recesses of the heart whence issued the eager response to the call of duty, but some of the motives which prompted and the feelings which stirred can still be set down in the colder atmosphere of reflection.

Foremost were those who were moved by that same spirit of adventure which brought our ancestors overseas to battle with the wilderness in order that peace and plenty might reign where hitherto the predatory wild beast held sway. To these the war was a great leap of faith and they wanted to make it. Theirs was an instinctive reasoning not altogether eradicated by University training. But for most of our men the decision was made after reflection on the nature of war, the peril from militant autocracy, the abuse of power; and they too went in gladly prepared to see it through and to count it not loss to die that freedom might be preserved. Sparing not themselves they recognized no limit to sacrifice and urged their juniors to carry on. "You have given two of us," said a youth to his father, "but that is not the best you can do," and straightway the youngest of the three was permitted to share in the hardship and the glory. The youngest returned but the hero who spoke thus lies asleep in No Man's Land. May his spirit abide with us still!

As befitted the University atmosphere there was little evidence of hysteria either on the part of those who went to the Front or of those who remained at home. To ameliorate the lot of those on active service the women of the University organized themselves quietly and throughout the four red years worked without ceasing to collect funds, manufacture comforts and despatch them to the seat of war. The few male students who attended the University either through youth or physical unfitness, organized and conducted an Overseas Correspondence Club which kept the University and its representatives in touch with one another, and gave no little assistance to those who were compiling this war record.

During the entire period the University and the affiliated Colleges were one in helping to carry on the war, their students fought side by side for the common cause, and in this Honour Roll they are not divided. Their common achievement stands as the symbol of a great aspiration and the pledge of a great tradition.

For the students who knew not war, as well as for those who survived, this volume has been compiled, in memoriam absentium in honorem praesentium, that they may treasure it and by so doing develop a sense of kinship with their seniors whose age and outlook gave them an opportunity to do their duty and in so doing to win renown. Had the war been five years earlier or five years later the names in such a volume would have been different but the spirit would have been the same, and it is the spirit that we would emphasize rather than the glory. To defend the weak, to fight for liberty, justice and truth, to subordinate oneself to the great purpose of the race, to give one's best even unto life itself,—this is the priceless gift which they have made or bequeathed to us. It is ours only to cherish that we may pass it on.

MANET PRISCA FIDES ET MANEBIT

"The ancient honour liveth yet;
Men die, the race doth not forget."

Dear hearts, dear lives, to us how fondly dear,
In lavish greatness greatly given away;
The stalwart strength that moved beside us here,
Fallen, and commingled with that alien clay.

They never can depart; within these walls
Faint echoes of young voices lingering dwell,
A brooding consecration through our halls
Makes the place sacred. Ah they bore them well

Those spirits, bright and generous and keen
Who heard too clearly duty's summoning voice.
Ah for the golden days that might have been
And shall not be! Yet still we shall rejoice;

For this one splendour through our darkness shines
That these, our blood, to race and faith were true:
That soul is shaped immortal, which divines
The challenge of the hour, and dares to do.

Not theirs the sin, but theirs the expiation;
They went forth with those clear envisioned eyes;
In each man's place, a flame-winged inspiration
Shines with the deathless light of sacrifice.
